JORDAN: FACTS AND FIGURES

January – December 2016

OVERVIEW

Since the onset of the conflict in Syria in 2011, hundreds of thousands of people have taken refuge in Jordan. As of January 2017, the UNHCR had registered 655,732 refugees, 78.5% of whom live in host communities, while the rest are accommodated in refugee camps, mainly in Zaatari and Azraq. Meanwhile, tens of thousands of people remained stranded at the Hadalat and Rukban crossing points, in the berm area between Syria and Jordan.

Throughout 2016, the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC) in Jordan continued to respond to the needs of thousands of Syrian refugees and communities hosting them. During the first quarter of last year, it provided food and non-food assistance, as well as water, health care and restoring family links services to people stranded at the berm and in Ruwayshid transit site. When other humanitarian organizations started operating at the berm, the ICRC adjusted the scope of its programs: while maintaining health activities, it handed over the provision of food, non-food items and water to other organizations. However, with the closure of the border in June following a car bomb attack, the ICRC had to stop its medical programs at the berm, while it continued to assist Syrian nationals hosted in Ruwayshid transit site.

To ease the situation of vulnerable people in host communities, the ICRC, together with the Jordan Red Crescent Society (JRCS), delivered relief items to Syrians and Jordanians residing in five southern governorates. In Mafrqa and Madaba governorates, it provided Syrian families, mostly female-headed, with monthly cash assistance, to help them cover their daily expenses.

The ICRC also completed seven projects to upgrade the water infrastructure in selected areas in North Badia for the benefit of more than 220,000 Jordanians and Syrians, in collaboration with the Ministry of Water and Irrigation and the Yarmouk Water Company. In Zaatari and Azraq camps, it helped hundreds of Syrian refugees maintain contact with their families inside Syria and elsewhere.

In addition to its response to the Syrian refugee crisis, the ICRC continued to visit detainees and discuss bilaterally with the relevant authorities possible issues related to treatment and living conditions. It also promoted respect for International Humanitarian Law (IHL) among various sectors of the Jordanian society, including national authorities, armed and security forces, universities, the media and civil society institutions. On a regional level, the delegation in Jordan provided large-scale logistical and training services to other ICRC delegations in the Middle East region and beyond.

To ensure a meaningful humanitarian response, the ICRC coordinates its action with the relevant ministries and departments within the Jordanian government, other international and non-governmental organizations operating in Jordan, as well as partners of the International Red Cross and Red Crescent Movement.

Environment courses, two Personal Efficiency courses and four Humanitarian Leadership and Management School courses for a total of 940 ICRC staff members from 29 delegations across the Middle East, Europe, West Asia, North America and Libya.

MISSION

The International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC) is an impartial, neutral and independent organization whose exclusively humanitarian mission is to protect the lives and dignity of victims of armed conflict and other situations of violence and to provide them with assistance. The ICRC also endeavors to prevent suffering by promoting and strengthening humanitarian law and universal humanitarian principles. Established in 1863, the ICRC is at the origin of the Geneva Conventions and the International Red Cross and Red Crescent Movement. It directs and coordinates the international activities conducted by the Movement in armed conflicts and other situations of violence.
